Biographical Sketch:

During World War II General Ewell served with the 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment as Regimental Executive Officer, Battalion Commander, and finally as Regimental Commander. The 501st participated in the European campaigns as part of the 101st Airborne Division. Jumps in which General Ewell participated were Normandy on D-Day and Holland in the latter part of 1944. While in Holland he succeeded to the regimental command and fought in the defense of Bastogne during the battle of Ardennes.

Following the War General Ewell became an instructor at the Command and General Staff College. In 1949 he returned to Europe serving as Executive Officer to the U. S. Commander, Berlin until he joined the staff of Headquarters, Seventh U. S. Army, Stuttgart, as Plans and Policies Officer.

In July 1953 General Ewell assumed command of the 9th Infantry Regiment in Korea, and in December of that year became a member of the G-3 staff, Headquarters, Eighth U. S. Army. On his return to the United States he spent four years at West Point as commander of a cadet regiment and later Assistant Commandant of Cadets.

From 1959 to 1961 he was assigned to the office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations as Chief of the War Plans Division and later Chief of the Long Range Analysis Group. In 1961 General Ewell transferred to the White House to be Executive Assistant to General

Maxwell D. Taylor while the latter was serving as Military Representative of the President. Following this assignment he was Executive to the Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff.

In 1963 General Ewell was sent to Germany as the Assistant Division Commander, 8th Infantry Division. While serving with this division, he was Joint Airborne Task Force Commander of the Southex exercise in Turkey and was in command of Army troops in North Wind, the largest airborne exercise in Europe since World War II.

General Ewell was Chief of Staff, V Corps in Frankfurt, Germany from June 1965 until assuming his present duties in June 1966.

Critiques of Programmed Map-Reading Exercise

25X1A9a

On 22 March [REDACTED] programmed map-reading exercise was given to the CT's in the Intelligence Techniques Course. The students were given ten minutes at the end of the four-hour period to write unsigned critiques of the exercise. A summary of the critiques is as follows:

"Of the 44 critique forms returned (one student was called out to a conference with his advisor), 28 were definitely favorable, 4 were somewhat favorable, 5 were neutral (including one which was both favorable and unfavorable), 2 were somewhat negative, and 5 were negative. Judging from the handwriting, most or all of the girls gave favorable responses.

Many of the critiques agreed that it was wearing work to be buried so deeply into maps, and a number suggested giving the program in, perhaps, 2-hour doses, which would also improve retention. As one would expect from critique forms, there were some topics in which a small number of people took diametrically opposed views. Those who wanted an introductory film before beginning work on the program were almost balanced by those who stated they wanted no film; those who felt it was boring were balanced by those who felt it was exciting; those who felt it was too detailed were balanced by those who felt it was well paced on the whole. As usual, also, a few disagreed with themselves -- in a few instances saying the program was too detailed, and then complaining that a minor definition had been omitted. A significant number felt that an hour's introductory lecture would make them feel more at home with the program, though there were some who felt that, once they got used to the programmed format, they had no need for a lecture."
